Ryan Roberts is a civil litigator who defends clients in complex litigation matters involving claims of negligence, product liability, wrongful death, catastrophic injury, and other toxic tort issues, as well as breach of contract disputes. He thrives when addressing intricate cases; breaking down each parties' issues into its component parts to distill and act upon the most advantageous strategies. Moreover, he is attentive, hands-on, and innovative, fully capable of providing uniquely tailored solutions for each of his clients. Ryan is results-driven and is standing ready to ardently advocate for your needs.

His prior experiences in natural resources/environmental litigation and water rights law instilled in him the robust legal foundation needed to deliver top-quality work products on a wide array of legal issues. With a background in economics, Ryan brings a sense of objective practicality to each matter, ensuring the client's overarching needs are met, not just their needs in the present litigation. He also brings general litigation experience from his time as a law clerk and legal support assistant, where he engaged in insurance carrier defense.
